FUTURE WORKFORCE FINDER

Future Workforce Finder Connects Students and Businesses

Students and businesses across South Dakota have a new way to connect thanks to the Future Workforce Finder, an online matching system launched recently by the Department of Education (DOE) and the Department of Labor and Regulation (DLR).

Supporting career and college readiness with work-based learning efforts helps reach the goal of attracting future employees while allowing students to explore careers and make informed choices. Businesses can help align classroom learning with on-the-job learning by:

- Providing a range of experiences that include career awareness and exploration to career preparedness
- Encouraging students to develop professional relationships with industry and community leaders
- Ensuring students receive monitored experiences with evaluated feedback
- Offering career guidance and coaching, general academic and educational guidance, and professional growth support to students
- Offering career immersive experiences for students that mimic, as closely as possible, workplace experiences.

Interested South Dakota employers can now go to weekofwork.sd.gov and click on the Future Workforce Finder button to create a profile.

Later this year, educators will be able to begin using the system to make connections between students and employers.
